CHALLENGES / GOALS:

- Needed to differentiate herself in the career transition space
- Needed to target professional women who are unfulfilled in their careers and seeking to start their own business
- Showcase that she is both a professional and a Mom
- Establish a more clear and concise presence for her following
- Align her brand with content for her podcast (Second Act Success)

OUTCOME:

- "You were able to help me tell my story with great clarity."
- "I get so many compliments because it looks professional and showcases my personality and my past."
- "It was the one thing I was missing to be able to pull it all together."
- "I'm able to help more women like me who want to move out of a 9-5 career and start their own business."

SHANNON'S STORY

Shannon Russell has always been a dreamer. As a young girl, she was mesmerized by what she saw on TV and decided that she wanted to build a life in the entertainment industry. When her parents surprised her with a trip to California after high school graduation, she knew right away she belonged in Los Angeles. Shannon became the first person in her family to attend college, graduating from Elon University with a Communications degree. She landed internships at CBS News and MTV, bringing her to New York City and eventually to Los Angeles, where she began growing her career as a television Executive Producer. Shannon was leading her dream life, but as often happens, things changed after giving birth to her first child. Changing priorities forced her to reevaluate what she wanted in life, and she decided it was time to refocus on her life as a new mom and start her own business so she could have more flexibility and freedom.

In 2016, she became a franchise owner with Snapology and grew her business into one of the top franchises in the country. On the heels of that success, Shannon decided to take her entrepreneurial spirit to an even greater height. She launched Second Act Success, a business designed to help women produce their best life by starting a business of their own. She is also the host of the Second Act Success podcast, and creator of companion coaching programs, and online courses. She shares her expertise in connecting clients with opportunities to help them produce a balanced life of abundance. She has grown a business that allows her to work from anywhere so she can travel more with her family. She wants to inspire her kids so they know they can do anything and hopes to be an inspiration for all those seeking to achieve a great life that measures up to their own unique dream.
